Dave Stewart

Dave's portfolio of management and leadership experience includes 30 years of challenging leadership roles within the British Army, not least of which have included command of an infantry battalion on operations. He has also served as a junior commander in the SAS, lead large teams delivering challenging portfolios of Surveillance, Communications and IT projects, operated at executive board level with the Audit Commission taking a key change leadership role, is a trustee of a disabled adults' charity, and contributes and mentors on multiple leadership programmes. He also consults on organisational development and change management across Defence, Security and Government.

Dave specializes in dealing with global change situations, currently working in leading VEGA Group plc's penetration of a number of market segments, and moving a disabled charity beyond its entrepreneurial start-up phase.

Underpinning Dave's tutor style is his ability to get the "people thing" right – inspiring unity of purpose and effort, and making things happen with energy, passion and lots of laughs along the way.
